

Hey, Tainá, what's up?

I've been thinking a lot lately, and I wanted to get some thing off my chest. Even at 14, I can sense the world changing. The air feels heavier, and the heat never seems to end. I play games, listen to music, and dance to distract myself from the news about forests burning and ice melting. It's like everything around us—my home, my family—is out of balance. Sometimes it feels like Earth is speaking, but we're not listening.

It's scary. I wonder what things will be like when I'm your age - 34, right? Will there still be seas to swim in and forests to explore? Will we have clean air to breathe? The sun feels hotter, and winters don't seem the same. I see polar bears stranded on shrinking ice, and it makes me wonder if it's too late. What is this progress if it brings us to this mess?

But even in dark moments, I still believe we can change things. People are talking more about saving our planet, and some are taking action. If we care enough, I mean really care, maybe we can turn things around—stop the burning, flooding, and melting, and set things right, back on track. Not just for us, but for future generations.

I don't know... I just want a world where the sky is clear, the trees and animals are safe. Where we feel free without constant worry. I believe we can have that. Can we?

This letter is a call to action for everyone who believes a better world—maybe even a better Universe—is possible. We once dreamed of flying, and we did it. We revived education and citizenship for adults. We can heal our planet and overcome hate by reconnecting with nature, life, love, compassion, and harmony.

The journey to a better universe is one we must take together. No one can do it alone. We have the strength, knowledge, creativity, and determination to make it happen. Let's do it and I hope I could post our universal union on social media!

See you soon. In 20 years.

Tainá,

Education is key to a better universe because it gives people the knowledge and skills to solve big problems. By learning, we understand issues like protecting nature, staying healthy, and treating each other fairly. Educated communities are more likely to come up with new ideas, improve lives, and make smart choices for the future. In short, education helps us all work together to create a safer, happier world for generations to come.
