POSTAL STAMPS

little travelers who tell big stories

Ever since postage stamps have existed, they have been the object of collection. This makes this hobby one of the oldest leisure activities in the world. Collecting stamps also means educating yourself in the most interesting way possible.

The charm of a stamp is not in the proof of payment of postage, but in its artistic value and the presentation of a significant motif in an extremely small space. So stamps are often called "small format works of art". The aesthetics of the design and the exceptionally high quality of the printing impress even non-collectors.

Postage stamps are the "business cards" of a certain country, including the stamps of the Republic of Srpska, one of the two entities in Bosnia and Herzegovina. They represent our culture, traditions and customs in a unique way, promote the richness of nature, and follow various sports and other important events. These little storytellers tell great stories in the most beautiful way possible...

The bicycle is probably one of the most popular means of transportation in the world. In some countries, bicycles are used for the purpose of public transport, and they have also found their place within sports.

The first bicycles were not so shiny and light, they were more robust, and from the perspective of today's riders, they are quite problematic to ride.

In 1817, Karl Freiherr von Drais first sat on "something" on two wheels. This device was very similar to today's children's pushchairs, it was only for adults, and it moved with its feet. It didn't have pedals, brakes, cat's eyes and her frame was wooden, but it was just that - Karl's first bike, called "draisine". Although Karl Drais studied architecture, he did not foresee the entire architecture on his vehicle, as well as the brakes, but he still completed the first run successfully.

Intangible cultural heritage is practice, presentation, expression, as well as combined knowledge and necessary skills, which communities, groups and in some cases, individuals recognize as part of their cultural heritage.

Passed down from generation to generation, constantly renewed in social communities and groups, as a reaction to the environment, as an interaction with nature and historical conditions of existence, intangible cultural heritage evokes a sense of identity and continuity. With this postage stamp we represent the Lipizzaner horse breed and traditional mowing in the Balkans.

"Walter Defends Sarajevo" is a Yugoslav partisan film from 1972, directed by Hajrudin Krvavec, and written by George Lebovic, Momo Kapor, Hajrudin Krvavec and Sava Predja, while the film was produced by Hidajet Calkic. The film presents a free interpretation of the biography of a real anti-fascist fighter from the Second World War - Vladimir Peric Valter.

"Walter Defends Sarajevo" is an exciting, action-packed, detective story about Sarajevo illegals and their leader, partisan intelligence officer - Walter. This war film is the most popular partisan-war film made in socialist Yugoslavia and after half a century it is a cultural phenomenon. It is a reminder of the glorious time of Yugoslav cinema. At the time, partisan films were Yugoslav westerns and followed patterns of the popular American genre.

Cerambyx cerdo Linnaeus, (Great capricorn beetle) is a Palearctic species whose range is decreasing, especially in the northern areas of Europe. It inhabits almost the entire Republic of Srpska in areas where there are oak forests.

Morimus funereus Mulsant (Beech Longhorn beetle) inhabits a wider area of Europe and is often present in deciduous forests in the Republic of Srpska.

Oryctes nasicornis (Rhinoceros beetle) inhabits the Palaearctic region, except for the British Isles. It prefers deciduous forests, located along the banks of rivers and above meadows.

300 years from the birth of Immanuel Kant

Immanuel Kant is the progenitor of classical German idealism and, according to many, one of the greatest philosophers of all time. He believed that the human mind creates the structure of experience, that reason is the source of morality that aesthetics derives from the ability to judge disinterestedly, that space and time are forms of our sensibility and that the world as it is in itself independent of our cognition. Kant considered his views to be the equivalent of the Copernican Revolution in philosophy, in the sense of Copernicus's refutation of the old world view that the Sun revolved around the Earth.

Emperor Yan or the Flame Emperor was a legendary ancient Chinese ruler in pre-dynastic times. Modern science has identified the Sheep's Head Mountains north of Baoji in Shaanxi Province as his homeland and territory.

According to ancient legend, Emperor Jan was the son of a dragon.

The Chinese calendar is a lunisolar calendar that is used in China, and with certain modifications, and in some countries of the Far East. In today's China, the Gregorian calendar is used for most daily activities, but Chinese is still used to mark traditional Chinese holidays such as the Chinese New Year Festival.

Film, as the most modern art, is largely dependent on science and technology. It is created and developed in close connection with the development of industrial technology, optical illusion and the desire to represent movement. Film is an art that uses moving images to convey stories, ideas and emotions. With the help of camera, editing, sound and other technical elements, the film creates the illusion of reality and allows viewers to immerse themselves in a different world.

Through film art, we can explore different styles, genres and themes, and have diverse experiences. An introduction to the art of film helps us understand and appreciate this powerful form of expression.

Watching movies is part of modern culture. Everyone and everything related to the film, its popular heroes and the actors who play them often become famous, and their pictures, stories and lives recognizable.

Seen from above, water is just water. However, when we dive into it, it is possible to discover a diversity of environments and ecosystems as rich as those on land.

Utricularia vulgaris L. is a perennial submerged plant from the Lentibulariaceae family. Lentibulariaceae has a branched stem that floats freely in the water without developed real roots, and can reach two meters in length. It is a strictly protected species in our country, because its populations are threatened by habitat loss.

Tench (Tinca tinca Linnaeus, 1758) is a freshwater fish from the carp family. It has a moderately elongated body and rounded fins. It is a widespread species in our country, but it is also strictly protected. It is protected because of overexploitation, as well as because of the endangered habitats it inhabits.

It is true that the game has always had importance and is not only a characteristic of modern society, but also of primitive societies, because that game was an integral part of their work, religion and philosophy of life. Today, thanks to the media, certain sports events have become globally popular, and in the past, sports news was obtained in different ways than today, because there was neither television nor the Internet. From the runners of the Marathon field until the late Middle Ages, the only way to transmit messages over long distances was carrier pigeons or couriers in the service of rulers, military leaders and lords. Regardless of everything, sport has always been a pastime, an escape from everyday life. Sports and sports games always express the very "spirit" of the society to which they belong.

Literature is the most diverse, versatile and complex form of art. The name itself is derived from book. Literature does not reject psychology, history, or religion - it absorbs everything that is sensory, experiential, and abstract.

The subject of literature is reality, phenomena and everything that happens in it, and most of all man and his feelings, experiences, desires, hopes, views on the world, in a word, his entire inner and social life.

By depicting the objective reality in pictures, the writer in fact presents his experience of that reality, his attitude towards it. Every phenomenon and detail taken from reality and brought into the work are imbued with the writer's imagination, feelings, and thoughts, which is why they acquire a subjective character, and become a new world - artistic and unrepeatable.

Kicking a ball comes naturally to most children. Take the child out into nature and put the ball in front of him, the child will most likely kick the ball, without any encouragement from you. Kicking the ball comes naturally without any great effort, just with a swing of the leg, and causes the child to be satisfied and smile. Without any goal, superior and necessary skills, the child enjoys the game and has fun, which leaves a beautiful and strong emotion in the child's memory. From those first kicks, some start playing football and the kids do it for fun, not being aware of the competitive segment. And when something is fun, like playing football, kids will want to do it whenever they have the chance.
