Take a Bite Out Of Counterfeits with the New Go For Real™ PSA

McGruff the Crime Dog® and the Go For Real™ campaign shed light on the dark side of fake pills and other counterfeit products in a new public service announcement.

The ad features three assembly lines making real and fake products including: sneakers, cosmetics, and fake pills. As the factory settings change, the hazards associated with fakes are spotlighted. At the end the Crime Dog is revealed, urging viewers and listeners to “think again,” before buying a fake product. Child labor, faulty safety standards, and the use of illicit fentanyl are called out in the 15, 30, and 60 second TV and radio spots.

About Go For Real

The United States Patent and Trademark Office (USPTO) and the National Crime Prevention Council have launched the Go For Real campaign to ensure consumers aren't fooled by criminals and learn the harms associated with purchasing counterfeit products. Through PSAs, radio ads, games, and educational materials directed at tweens and teens, the Go For Real campaign is changing buying behaviors and raising awareness of the damage caused by fake products.

❌ MYTH: Counterfeits are harmless and only impact big corporations that don't need the money.

✅ FACT: Counterfeiting is a multi-trillion dollar industry that helps to fuel other illicit activities, including human trafficking, drug sales and other criminal enterprises.

Think you'll save money buying the "fake"? Think again. 🤨

Everybody loves a deal. But cheap, fake versions of products can come at a great cost. Think about it:

- 🔥 Fake tech is known to cause house fires.
- 💊 Fake beauty products may contain toxic chemicals.
- 💊 Fake pills could be laced with deadly substances, like fentanyl.

Ex. 2

No one likes a faker.

Counterfeit products ranging from fashion to skincare to medications can cause serious harm.

Criminals don't test fakes for safety or quality - they cut corners at every step of the way. If you're lucky, you get a poor-quality product. Not so lucky? Try major injuries, medical bills or even death.

[Insert organization/Name] and @McGruffatNCPC urge consumers to "think again" before buying a fake. Uncover more at the link in our bio!
